AARP Media Sales Launches Week-Long Takeover Advertising Campaign as 50+ Becomes Dominant Consumer Demo

Campaign targets millennial media planners and buyers as 50+ demo climbs to 51 percent of all consumer expenditures

NEW YORK, NY – AARP Media Sales today announced the launch of its first week-long takeover marketing campaign aimed at the millennial media planning and buying audience using slang intended to grab their attention. This breakthrough campaign is designed to mark a milestone moment for people over age 50 now representing 51% of all consumer expenditures, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics' US 2014 Consumer Expenditure Survey released September 2015.

"Our takeover campaign celebrates that we have reached a tipping point – adults 50+ now dominate all consumer spending," said Shelagh Daly Miller, VP, Group Publisher, AARP Media Sales. "Marketers see the value in targeting 50+ adults and understand these consumers can't be ignored as they represent 75 percent more spending power than adults 18-49."

The campaign also reinforces AARP is everywhere with the 50+ demo – with a literal takeover of ads across print, digital, social media, and out of home coupled with creative native content launching on Medium. Ads will appear in print editions of The New York Times and Wall Street Journal, on marketing sites including AdAge, Adweek, Digiday, MediaPost, and eMarketer, on BuzzFeed and across social media, in transit hubs and media agency offices around New York City and in major markets across the country including Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The ads, color-blocked red with minimal text, feature short and bold slang reading: "DUH," "OBVI," "OMG," and "LEGIT" in response to questions about AARP Media Sales' knowledge of the 50-plus audience, including: "Does AARP Media Sales reach 50+ better than anyone?" and "Are AARP Media Sales the experts on the powerful 50+ audience?"

"We designed this campaign to capture media planners' and buyers' attentions with a striking message communicated in their 'language' to be seen where they are physically and digitally," said Patricia Lippe Davis, VP, Marketing, AARP Media Sales. "With our multiplatform 'takeover' ad campaign appearing everywhere – expected and unexpected – we aim to bring to life the concept that '50+ is everywhere' and that AARP's media properties are the best destinations to reach this group."
